Class & Race Features

Sneak Attack: +7d6 once per turn with advantage or an adjacent ally.
Cunning Action: Bonus action Dash, Disengage, or Hide.
Uncanny Dodge: Reaction to halve damage from an attacker you can see.
Evasion: On a successful Dex save vs. half-on-success effect, take no damage; on failure, only half.
Reliable Talent: Treat any d20 of 9 or lower as a 10 on skills you're proficient in.
Magical Ambush (lvl 9): When hidden from a target you cast a spell on, that target has disadvantage on the save.
Versatile Trickster (lvl 13): Use a bonus action to direct your Mage Hand to give a creature advantage on attacks against it until end of turn.
Expertise (4 skills + tools): Stealth, Sleight of Hand, Perception, Investigation, and Thieves' Tools.
Thieves' Cant: Secret signs and cant.
Mage Hand Legerdemain: Invisible Mage Hand; can pick locks, disarm traps, lift purses, stash items.
Fey Ancestry: Advantage vs. charm, immune to magical sleep.
Mask of the Wild: Hide when lightly obscured by foliage, rain, mist, snow.
Trance: 4 hours meditation = 8 hours sleep.

Spellcasting — Illusion Specialist

Int-based. Spell save DC 16, spell attack +8. Slots: 4 / 3 / 3 / 1 (1st / 2nd / 3rd / 4th).

Cantrips (4): Minor Illusion, Mage Hand, Prestidigitation, Friends.
1st Level (known): Disguise Self, Silent Image, Color Spray, Charm Person, Find Familiar, Sleep, Detect Magic.

2nd Level (known): Mirror Image, Invisibility, Phantasmal Force, Suggestion.
3rd Level (known): Major Image, Hypnotic Pattern, Fly.
4th Level (known): Phantasmal Killer, Greater Invisibility, Dimension Door.
Italics are illusion-school spells — Gilthaness's signature work. She generally avoids damage spells; she has them for emergencies and uses them as such.

Equipment

Weapons: +1 Rapier of Whispers (+11, 1d8+6 piercing; the blade hums very softly when drawn, an old enchantment she has never bothered to suppress), shortbow (+10, 1d6+5, 80/320 ft), three masterwork daggers (+10, 1d4+5, thrown 20/60).
Armor: +1 studded leather, supple and quiet.
Magic items: Cloak of Elvenkind (advantage on Stealth, disadvantage on Perception to spot her), Boots of Elvenkind (silent movement), Hat of Disguise (at-will Disguise Self), Bag of Holding, Pearl of Power (1st-level slot recovery, 1/day).
Kit: Masterwork thieves' tools, disguise kit, forgery kit, arcane focus (a small silver locket holding nothing identifiable).
On her person: 312 gp, 47 pp; a wooden bracelet carved with a vine pattern (the gift from Othrin Vesper); a folded letter she has never sent; a small vial of moor-water; a sprig of dried thyme.
Quirk item: A tiny enamelled box containing the first lockpick she ever owned, which she has not used in eighty years.

Personality

Trait: Listens more than she speaks. When she does speak, the room tends to settle.
Ideal: Attention is the rarest gift. Illusion is a study of this, not a betrayal of it.
Bond: A vine-carved wooden bracelet from her teacher Othrin Vesper, dead seventy years. She has not taken it off since.
Flaw: No longer trusts her first instinct in a crisis. The second-guessing is occasionally — rarely — half a second too slow.

Backstory

Gilthaness of the Long Wood began as exactly the sort of thief one would expect — bright, fast, in love with the work — and joined the Quiet Hand of Veyrith young, by elven standards. She rose through it; left it; came back; left again. The second leaving cost her: two friends she could not abandon, and one she could not save.

She learned illusion late — a hundred and ten years into her life — from a half-mad master named Othrin Vesper, who taught her that the world is mostly made of attention, that the strongest illusions are the ones the audience finishes, and that no one is harder to fool than someone who wants to be fooled. She has spent seventy years thinking about all three.

She has been in and out of Driftmoor for thirty years. Lately she has heard rumors of a young Wood Elf rogue with red hair and a dangerous curiosity. She is not yet sure whether she is curious as a peer, as a teacher, or as a warning.
