PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION

Tall and broad-shouldered, with weathered pale skin, short straw-colored hair, and a scar from left temple to jaw. She wears a faded Carrowmere surcoat and carries her greatsword with the ease of long habit.

CURRENT STATE

Mood: Guarded, steady

Disposition: Respectful, but testing the party for reliability

Brenna Carrowmere

THE PERSON BEHIND THE NUMBERS

VALUES & DRIVES

- A sworn word binds harder than iron and costs more than blood.
- Skill is a moral duty when others depend on it.
- Stand between danger and specific people.
- Find a company worthy of an honest oath.

FEARS & WOUNDS

- Obeying a lawful order that is morally wrong.
- Having trained herself out of ordinary softness.
- The night she lost Ser Halmond.
- Becoming only useful, never known.

VOICE & MANNER

- Plain, brief speech, often after a long pause.
- Politeness is armor where steel is forbidden.
- Dry, sparse, unexpectedly sharp humor.
- Anger rises in precision, not volume.

LOYALTIES

- Her father and his inconvenient decency.
- The memory of Ser Halmond.
- Anyone she has accepted as hers in the field.
- People who keep costly promises.

INTERNAL CONTRADICTION

Brenna wants to belong and refuses to do it cheaply. Duty makes her dependable but keeps her distant: she can guard someone completely and still refuse their care.

SIGNIFICANT DETAIL

A bronze Whitecairn falcon badge is sewn inside her surcoat.

OPEN THREADS

- Find oathworthy company
- Unresolved Whitecairn grief
- Whether to remain in Driftmoor
